Shelters bracing for winter

- Shepherds of Good Hope, Ottawa Mission and the Salvation Army work together to ensure 'no one gets turned away' during overflow season: Spokesman
- Shelters looking for donations of boots, coats, mitts, scarves, hats and underwear as cold weather hits

The official first day of winter may not be for a few more weeks, but as far as shelters in the city are concerned, it's already here.

"This is the beginning of it," said Shepherds of Good Hope spokesman Rob Eady.

The past several nights have seen some of the coldest temperatures this season, and the Shepherds of Good Hope "is a bit on the overflow," Eady said.

"Our numbers have gone up," he said yesterday. "There were a few more people sleeping in the shelter last night and ... We're seeing more faces in our soup kitchen."

Eady estimates a 10 per cent increase, with more young people and women than usual.

Over at the Ottawa Mission, "we have more guys staying inside because of the weather," said senior program manager Simon Brazier. "And staff are ... encouraging people to come inside.

"When the cold weather hits, we make sure that if there are no beds, we put them on the ground or secure a bed for them somewhere in the city," Brazier added.

Staff at Shepherds are prepared for the influx that the cold brings, Eady said.

"We'll be making sure the clients will be dressed in layers, drinking lots of liquids, and making sure they have something on their heads."

"Winter is always a challenging time of year for shelters. We're always hoping for a mild winter."

Gamers play like back in the day

- Gaming groups from across Ottawa and Gatineau participated
- The annual weekend festival has been running five years

STEVE COLLINS
@METRONEWS.CA

While some gamers headed across the border last weekend for sales on the latest Xbox and PlayStation 3 titles, fans of old-school fun flocked to the Ludo-Outaouais Board Game Festival at the Tetrault Community Centre in Gatineau.

Crowds of up to 130 gamers sampled the festival's library of some 550 board games, all of which were free to play.

"If you've got a dusty old copy of Monopoly in your closet, that's not the be-all and end-all of what board gaming is," said organizer Yves Tourigny, noting at least 700 new games were published in 2010.

"From 9 a.m. to 1 a.m. last night it was game on. We had to kick people out at 1."
YVES TOURIGNY, LUDO-OUTAOUAIS

"It's a great social activity," he said. "It's a great way to get involved with your kids. If you're not that social, it's a way to meet other people."

To encourage mingling, organizers awarded prizes for playing with as many other people as possible over the weekend.

The festival also collected used games for Entraide familiale de l'Outaouais to give to disadvantaged families at Christmas.

Firefighters credit alarms

Working smoke alarms are being credited for saving the lives of four people after a fire broke out at a home on Prince of Wales Drive Friday.

Firefighters said a fire, which started in the basement, set off the smoke detectors. The family escaped unharmed, but there was extensive fire damage to the basement and the main floor of the dwelling, and heavy smoke damage throughout the home. The fire caused over $300,000 in damages.

Safe chatters to be rewarded

Cellphone users could have an encounter with an Ottawa police officer — and for once, it could be a good thing.

In December and January, Ottawa police traffic officers will be rewarding drivers who have pulled their vehicle over safely to the side of the roadway to use their cellphone with two free movie passes.

Using a non-hands-free cellphone while driving in Ontario could result in a $155 fine under the Highway Traffic Act.

▶ Immigration Minister Jason Kenney

ROMA FAMILIES ASK FOR ASYLUM REVIEW

Two Roma refugee families have asked the Federal Court of Canada to review their failed asylum claims, alleging bias by the refugee board against the Roma.

The allegations stem from a series of negative comments made by Immigration Minister Jason Kenney last year, suggesting refugee claims by Roma were bogus, before reinstating visa restrictions for travellers from the Czech Republic.

In their application for a judicial review this month, the families claim Kenney's comments influenced the decision-making of the independent board members whose appointments to the tribunal hinge on the immigration minister.

Using Immigration and Refugee Board of Canada statistics, Toronto lawyer George Kubes compares the tribunal's Roma acceptance rates before and after Kenney's criticisms in the summer of 2009.

According to court submissions, 97 per cent of Czech Roma were granted asylum in the first part of 2009. By last April the rate had plummeted to 0.09 per cent.

"After the minister made such statements condemning the Roma, there was no way they could get a fair hearing by the board because the members are appointed and reappointed by the minister," said Kubes, who represents the families of Ivana Cervenakova and Jaroslav Dunka in Hamilton.

Both families claim they fled persecution by neo-Nazis in the Czech Republic; their refugee claims in Canada were rejected this summer.

The battle of Vaughan

Toronto-area riding a 'steep, steep hill' for the Tories: Party spokesman

Area was among top 25 ridings for the Liberals in the 2008 election

DARREN CALABRESE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Conservative MP candidate and former OPP commissioner Julian Fantino, left, and Prime Minister Stephen Harper meet Ava Longo and mother Jessica at an ice cream restaurant in Vaughan, Ont., in October.

Three federal byelections today won't alter the balance of power in Canada's minority Parliament — not that you'd know it from the frenetic, no-holds-barred campaigning that's preceded them.

Name-calling, mudslinging, allegations of dirty tricks, party leaders traipsing regularly into the two ridings in Manitoba and one in Ontario that are up for grabs.

The five-week contests have been so nasty that the venom regularly spilled over into the House of Commons, forcing Speaker Peter Milliken last week to finally step in and shut it down.

It's a measure of what's at stake — particularly in the northern Toronto riding of Vaughan — as federal leaders prepare for a national election widely expected after the next budget in February or March.

For Prime Minister Stephen Harper, Vaughan represents a chance to snatch away a riding held by the Liberals for 22 years, establishing an important Conservative beach head in the last remaining Grit fortress in the country, Toronto.

Just as important, it's an opportunity to sap Liberal morale and destabilize Michael Ignatieff's leadership.

Indeed, Tories are privately hoping Vaughan will be for Ignatieff what Outremont was for his predecessor, Stéphane Dion. The loss of Outremont, a long-time Liberal bastion in Montreal, in a 2007 byelection triggered an ugly bout of internecine warfare that weakened Dion's already shaky grasp on the reins of his party, which went on to its worst electoral defeat in history the following year.

Harper has left nothing to chance. He recruited former OPP commissioner Julian Fantino to run for the Conservatives — a prize catch in a riding with a large Italian constituency. Prime ministers typically don't get involved in byelections but in this case Harper turned up at the start of the campaign to show off his star recruit.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dodging defeat?

Despite eroding Liberal support in the riding, Vaughan is not likely to be Ignatieff's Waterloo.

- There is no leader-in-waiting who disgruntled Liberals seem prepared to rally around.
- Liberal organizers have poured into Vaughan to help their candidate, Tony Genco. Their campaign has taken some of the shine off Fantino, zeroing in on his controversial record as a top cop and his assertion that the Charter of Rights has most benefited criminals.

If Tories take the riding...

Liberal insiders concede if Vaughan falls it bodes ill for other Toronto MPs who hung on by fewer than 3,000 votes last time, including Ken Dryden, Joe Volpe, Ruby Dhalla, Paul Szabo and Andrew Kania.

Losing Vaughan would undoubtedly trigger grumbling about Ignatieff, who's already under fire from some Liberal MPs over his support for extending Canada's military mission in Afghanistan.

Latest leaks show U.S. diplomacy

WikiLeaks releases more than 250,000 U.S. State Department cables in defiance of White House ◆ As many as 2,648 documents refer to Canada

BERTIL ERICSON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The revelations

Hundreds of thousands of documents leaked yesterday revealed a hidden world of backstage international diplomacy.

- Nuclear fears
  The cables detail U.S., Israeli and Arab world fears of Iran's growing nuclear program and U.S. concerns about Pakistan's atomic arsenal.
- Information gathering
  There are American memos encouraging UN diplomats at the United Nations to collect detailed data about the UN secretary general, his team and foreign diplomats.

WIKI LEAKS

Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon called a massive leak of U.S. documents "deplorable" yesterday.

The leak "may threaten our national security," Cannon said in a statement.

The criticism came as several news outlets began publishing American diplomatic cables obtained by whistleblower website WikiLeaks. Soon after, the cables were available to the public at wikileaks.org.

The documents touch on everything from the release of Guantanamo Bay prisoners and Iran's military capabilities to Libyan leader Moammar Ghadafi's eccentricities and U.S. efforts to spy on United Nations officials.

A total of 1,948 cables originating from U.S. diplomats in Ottawa and hundreds of others from various consulates appear to be among the leaked materials.

WikiLeaks confirmed late yesterday there would be as many as 2,648 documents that refer to Canada.

The vast majority of these cables are not expected to become public until sometime this week, but the website offered some hints about the broad range of topics they cover: arms control, CBC coverage, energy technology, Haiti, military nuclear applications, provincial affairs and Syria.

One of the few documents released yesterday to mention Canada described a 2009 meeting at which Ben Rowswell, the representative of Canada in Kandahar, who joined in asking about the credibility of Afghan elections.

More woe for Haiti with chaotic election

- Man shot to death at a polling place in Artibonite
- Several deaths in recent weeks due to political clashes

Nearly all the major candidates in Haiti's presidential election have backed a statement calling for the cancellation of yesterday's election.

The statement read to a cheering crowd also calls for people to take to the streets to protest allegations of fraud.

Candidate Anne Marie Josette Bijou read the statement on behalf of 12 of the 19 candidates.

They accuse current President Rene Preval of favouring candidate Jude Celestin of his Unity party.

There are widespread reports of people unable to vote. Many have been told their names are not on voter lists.

It is not yet clear whether the problems are due to fraud or merely a result of disorganization following the January earthquake.

With most poll stations opening late, observers from dozens of parties crowded voting areas and furious voters were turned away from stations where poll workers could not find their names on lists. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Election trouble

Those on the ground in Haiti predicted a chaotic election day.

- More than 4.7 million voters are registered on electoral lists. Monitors with the United Nations acknowledge that hundreds of thousands are people who died in the earthquake.
- Preliminary results were not expected until Dec. 7.

Naked Gun actor dies

Leslie Nielsen, who went from drama to inspired bumbling as a hapless doctor in Airplane! and the accident-prone detective Frank Drebin in the The Naked Gun comedies, has died. He was 84.

His agent John S. Kelly says Nielsen died yesterday at a hospital near his home in Ft. Lauderdale where he was being treated for pneumonia.

Nephew Doug Nielsen, who lives in Richmond, B.C., says his uncle had been hospitalized for about the past 12 days and died in his sleep.

Friends and wife, Barbaree, were by the Regina-born actor's side.

Nielsen came to Hollywood in the mid-1950s after performing in 150 live television dramas in New York. With a craggily handsome face, blond hair and six-foot-two height, he seemed ideal for a movie leading man.

He had stars on both Hollywood's and Canada's Walk of Fame. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Greenhouse gas U-turn

According to new Environment Minister John Baird, the Harper government has no plans to follow a U.S. initiative to slash the greenhouse gas emissions of big polluters — even though Ottawa has pledged to harmonize its climate policies with the Americans. Back to the Future for Ontario man

Super-fan has seen film and sequels over 100 times each ◐ First-ever fan convention to be held this month

"Wait a minute, Doc," an incredulous Marty McFly says to Dr. Emmet Brown in a memorable scene from Back to the Future. "Are you telling me that you built a time machine ... out of a DeLorean?"

If you've seen the movie, and who hasn't, you know that Doc did, and so has Ken Kapalowski, complete with flux capacitor and fusion generator.

The Burlington, Ont., man says BTTF fans are always thrilled to see his 1981 DeLorean DMC-12 modified to look just like the one in the movie that transports Marty, played by Michael J. Fox, to 1955 from 1985. Kapalowski recently cruised down to New York City in it for a cast reunion marking the film's 25th anniversary.

"It's incredible," he says. "People swerve from their lanes and hang out their windows with their camera phones, honk and give us thumbs-up. People love it."

Great Scott! Has it been 25 years since Back to the Future was released?

Yes, but it's still 1985 for Kapalowski, who has been reliving 1985 since he first saw the movie at the age of eight.

Great Scott!

Ken Kapalowski will be organizing the first-ever convention for Back to the Future fans this month in California.

- Ken will be making appearances with his car to raise money for Team Fox and the Michael J. Fox Foundation to help fight Parkinson's disease
- He had a DeLorean, of which only 9,000 were ever built in 1981-82, by his 21st birthday.
- His obsession has cost him about $25,000 and countless hours spent looking for and installing the 1960s aircraft parts that made the car look like a time machine built by a mad scientist.

EU gives billions to bail out Ireland

Country has until 2015 to reduce deficits Ireland joins Greece in depending on foreign aid

European Union nations agreed to give $89.4 billion in bailout loans to Ireland yesterday to help it weather the cost of its massive banking crisis.

The rescue deal, approved by finance ministers at an emergency meeting in Brussels, means Ireland and Greece have now come to depend on foreign help and underscores Europe's struggle to contain its spreading debt crisis. The fear is that with Greece and now Ireland shored up, speculative traders will target the bloc's other weak fiscal links, particularly Portugal.

In Dublin, Irish Prime Minister Brian Cowen said the accord "provides Ireland with vital time and space to successfully and conclusively address the unprecedented problems that we've been dealing with since this global economic crisis began."

EU chiefs also gave Ireland an extra year, until 2015, to reduce its annual deficits to three per cent of GDP, the eurozone limit.

Still, analysts and opposition leaders in Ireland warned that the country of 4.5 million was taking on a bill it couldn't afford to repay.

U.S. President Barack Obama is back on the basketball court, though this time with two players less likely to throw an elbow his way — his daughters.

The White House says that Malia and Sasha Obama joined their father yesterday morning for some hoop time at the gym inside the building that houses the Interior Department.

On Friday, Obama took an elbow to the mouth while playing a pickup basketball game with friends at Fort McNair. He received 12 stitches to close a cut to the left side of his lower lip. The White House identified the man who struck him as Rey Decerega.

Big banks set to show good health in Q4

- Earnings to increase by up to nine per cent for year
- Less growth for TD and RBC expected

The big news on the Toronto stock market in the days ahead will be a slew of fourth-quarter earnings reports from Canada's biggest banks, which are expected to paint a healthier picture of Canada's financial institutions.

Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Montreal, TD Canada Trust, CIBC and Scotiabank and National Bank of Canada are scheduled to report their fourth quarter earnings over the next two weeks.

The banks' capital markets divisions — which were a big drag on bank earnings in the prior quarter — are expected to show an improvement in the three months ended Oct. 31.

But the banks' strong domestic foothold in consumer banking provides the foundation for robust earnings growth, said Jonathan Popper, assistant vice-president and senior portfolio manager at MFC Global Investment Management.

"Canada's been in the sweet spot, our real-estate market has been strong, interest rates are low," he said.

"The mortgage numbers are going to look good for all the banks and the loan loss provisions, with consumer confidence going up, not only will that not be a disappointment, but it could be a positive surprise," Popper said.

However, TD Bank and Royal Bank of Canada could see less significant growth than their peers, dragged by operations in the United States where the consumer credit and mortgage markets are still in the doldrums.

Investors will be looking for signs that some of the big six banks will start raising dividends again after taking a pause during the recession.

DIFFICULT NOT TO RUSH TO JUDGMENT

Urban Compass

STEVE COLLINS

My reaction to Stacy Bonds' manhandling by police was instant and probably similar to yours: Disgust and anger.

I'm sympathetic to police Chief Vern White, tasked last week with more damage control than usual, dealing not only with public horror at the Bonds incident, but also the anger of taxi drivers at the acquittal of Const. Shyldon Safruk on charges of assaulting one of them after a traffic dispute.

"It's difficult sometimes because the court of public opinion sometimes passes judgment quicker than we can," he told me. "We have to conduct an investigation."

I can't fault White's approach. He is keeping the lines of communication open. Neither of these stories is over. Ottawa police and SIU investigations continue.

But when I watch the Bonds video, it drains me of patience and fair-mindedness. It also contradicts what was at the very least a self-serving version of events offered by police.

It reminds me of footage of brutal strip searches at Kingston's Prison for Women in the 1990s, which ultimately resulted in the shutting down of that institution, and that of Robert Dziekanski's 2007 death at the Vancouver airport, which also put the lie to the factually challenged testimony of the RCMP officers involved.

"While most of the focus is on the conduct of police, from arrest onward, I think we can spare a little scrutiny for the Crown, which, presumably in possession of the video evidence, went ahead with assault charges against Bonds."

I'm trying to keep an open mind, but it's not easy when I learn that two of the cops involved in the Bonds incident had been caught roughing up prisoners on other occasions. One of them, Sgt. Steve Desjourdy, was disciplined for kicking and Tasering another female prisoner just days before the Bonds incident.

He has been relieved for now of the burden of dealing with the public, and that's sensible.

While most of the focus is on the conduct of police, from arrest onward, I think we can spare a little scrutiny for the Crown, which, presumably in possession of the video evidence, went ahead with assault charges against Bonds. The judge, in throwing these out, denounced them as a "travesty."

Am I rushing to judgment? Yeah, I guess so. I await, as always, new evidence that what Bonds experienced on her walk home that night was anything less than wrongful arrest, police brutality and prosecutorial railroading. But it would have to be pretty good.

Symbol of transformation

Ultimate choice

ALASTAIR GRANT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sometimes a dress is just a dress. But not in Kate Middleton's case.

Her wedding dress will be the symbol of her transformation from commoner to princess, from Kate to Catherine, and define her image to billions of people as they watch her exchange vows with Prince William next spring.

This dress must be elegant, memorable and perfectly fitted. There are delicate balances to be struck: Modern but traditional; alluring but not too sexy; classy but not overly opulent — more grown up than Princess Diana's famous meringue confection, with its puffy sleeves and 25-foot train.

Whatever the ultimate choice, expectations are sky high. Middleton has natural good looks and a radiant smile — people seem to wish her well, even if she will be able to afford a dream dress that is far beyond most people's reach.

"I'm not sure if she could pull off a Diana dress, but it would be great if she had something that magnificent," said Mary Alders, 32, a secretary who is looking forward to the royal wedding. "Whatever it is, everyone will want it. I can see it as silk, maybe some beading. It definitely will be spectacular." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DO YOU HAVE BACK OR NECK PAIN?

CDPC
CANADIAN DECOMPRESSION & PAIN CENTERS

Health Canada Approved Treatments

Book Your Free Consultation Today!

For many years, the Canadian Decompression and Pain Centers (CDPC) have been successfully treating chronic low back and neck pain using a uniquely developed treatment protocol called Neuro-Decompression. This revolutionary treatment procedure has consistently achieved great results at CDPC locations throughout Canada. Results are usually long lasting. Referrals come from surgeons, medical doctors, and other health care professionals across the country, but referral is not required (you can contact us directly). Neuro-Decompression is a three-phased system that was developed by CDPC doctors.

To determine if you are a candidate for treatment at CDPC:
Book a FREE consultation. Bring your MRI, CT Scans, or X-Rays, as they are usually conclusive. Some tests may be performed on site if you have not previously had any.

The following three phases at CDPC are performed simultaneously during a patient's treatment.

Phase 1: Vertebral Decompression System

Vertebral Decompression involves the use of a specially designed table attached to an advanced bio-feedback computer module. During consultation, specific parameters for each patient are factored into developing a customized treatment plan, consisting of the number of sessions required, and their frequency. The computerized technology allows the table to pull and decompress the spine by making mechanical changes comfortably. Most patients find the treatment relaxing and read magazines or listen to music during treatment.

Phase 2: Oxygen Enhancement (Certain Patients Only)

This second phase of the system offers patients the unique combination of inhaling pure grade oxygen (up to 92%) during the procedure. The basis of this phase is to relax the patient. It also encourages healing of the joint and disc. Oxygen also provides relief from muscle stiffness caused by the build-up of lactic acid.

Phase 3: Neuro-Nutrition

The third phase is where a patient is given a premium herbal pain reliever in capsule form, developed by CDPC. The patient is also given a nutritional detoxification drink to expedite the healing of joints and discs, which play an important role in the repair of damaged discs and joints.

Frequently Asked Questions

What conditions is the system used for?
This system is excellent for any type of neurological condition, or disc and joint problem. Neck and Back problems are the most commonly treated.

Is the treatment affordable?
Consultations are free. Senior discounts are also available. Patients may be subsidized if in financial difficulty. If you have been involved in an auto accident, you may receive full funding from your auto insurance company.

Are the benefits to this treatment short term or long term?
Long term. The purpose of this procedure is to "counter" the damage incurred by aging, injury, or wear and tear, when your condition improves, you will no longer have pain.

Celebrities to support World AIDS Day by signing off Twitter, Facebook

Alicia Keys and Lady Gaga take charity work seriously, and they're going offline to prove it.

Gaga, Justin Timberlake, Usher and other celebrities have joined a new campaign called Digital Life Sacrifice on behalf of Keys' charity, Keep a Child Alive. The entertainers plan to sign off of social media platforms like Facebook and Twitter on Wednesday, which is World AIDS Day. The participants will sign back on when the charity raises $1 million.

"It's really important and super-cool to use mediums that we naturally are on," Keys said in a phone interview from New York last week.

For the campaign celebrities have filmed last tweet and testament videos and will appear in ads showing them lying in coffins to represent what the campaign calls their digital deaths.

"It's so important to shock you to the point of waking up," Keys said.

The foundation, which began in 2003, will accept donations through text messages and bar-code technology, which is featured in the charity's Buy Life campaign. Raised efforts support families affected by HIV/AIDS in Africa and India.

"We're trying to sort of make the remark: Why do we care so much about the death of one celebrity as opposed to millions and millions of people dying in the place that we're all from?" said Leigh Blake, the president and co-founder of Keep a Child Alive.

When she began recruiting others, not one person said no, Keys recalled.

"I have a feeling that Gaga is going to raise it all by herself," Blake said. Lady Gaga has more than 7.2 million followers on Twitter, and nearly 24 million fans on Facebook.

"She's got a very, very mobilized fan base and that's beautiful to watch I think (and) she's able to draw their attention to these issues that are very important, you know, and that people follow it and act."

INXS seeking new Fortune

Band tears apart old songs Re-imagines them on new Original Sin album with their Canadian singer

A new collection of reinterpreted INXS classics really resonated with J.D. Fortune — not to mention his neighbours.

"I almost got evicted because of the Drum Opera," Fortune laughed in a recent telephone interview, referring to the propulsive opening track on the new disc, Original Sin, which comes out Tuesday.

"I was in my condo here in L.A. and I had the landlord himself — who lives in another building — come up and tell me to turn it down.

"I played the Drum Opera like six times in a row and drank the biggest glass of red wine you've ever seen. He's like, 'Man, I hate to bother you, but we've had some complaints. Three miles away. You might want to turn that down."

Indeed, restraint wasn't really on the menu when the band approached this project, seeking instead to twist their familiar songs into unrecognizable new shapes.

Fortune, the Mississauga, Ont., native who has been an on-again, off-again member of INXS since winning a reality TV show in 2005, sings one track on the album (The Stairs) but will take the lead vocals once again for an upcoming Australian tour.

For the rest of the record, the Aussie band — whose original frontman Michael Hutchence died in 1997 — enlisted a variety of guest singers, including Ben Harper, Rob Thomas and Tricky, for the 12-track album.

Fortune

What really happened?

Star Fortune shot to stardom when he won the television reality contest Rock Star: INXS in '05 and became the new frontman for the band. Later that year, he sang on the group's record, Switch, which topped the Canadian charts. But after nearly two years of touring behind the record, Fortune claimed the band dumped him at a Hong Kong airport, leaving him to live out of a truck, a story the band denied.

WHITER SHADE OF PALE
"ALWAYS ASSUME FOR THE WORST"

Author Christian Lander says he's still shocked by the success of his megahit blog-turned-book Stuff White People Like.

"I'm a little neurotic — I sort of always assume for the worst — so I didn't think the first book was going to do well. I was super nervous. And then it did well and I was amazed they let me do a second one," he said.

That second book is Whiter Shades of Pale, a humorous look at regional differences within North American white culture.

Vancouver's white people are described as "the most elite white person on the whole West Coast."

"They have out-yogaed Los Angeles, out-Asian-fetished San Francisco, and out-outdoored Seattle.

All three are nearly impossible tasks and yet Vancouver has been able to pull them off!" Landers wrote.

Lander's first book was a bestseller.

Butt-kicking women of NCIS

Cote de Pablo & Pauley Perrette play the only crime-fighting women on the show Both say that they relish in their roles and characters

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Being the only girls in the crime-fighting world of NCIS can be daunting, but series stars Cote de Pablo and Pauley Perrette insist the familial atmosphere of the show — now filming its eighth season — keeps them from feeling left out.

In fact, de Pablo says the combination is just right. "It's very rare when you have a top-rated show," says the actress, who joined the cast in the third season.

"If you were to take out any of these characters, you would be messing with the chemistry."

Playing Ziva, a former Mossad agent, calls for more than a few stunts, which de Pablo relishes. "Nothing gets me more pumped than a really good fight sequence," says de Pablo.

There are risks, of course. "At a certain point, you may get hurt," she says. "Certainly, I've had injuries. The simplest things are the ones that hurt you.

"I did one fall and my neck was basically shot for about two weeks."

Perrette's role as forensic specialist Abby isn't nearly as physical, but it instead calls for something of a mental workout.

"I have probably four hours of studying to do tonight," she says. "The things that Abby has to say, there's no way to do that without studying.

"I've got props and microscopes and mass spectrometers and so many things to do that if you're not super-prepared, I don't think there'd be any way you could play Abby. It's a lot."

Both actresses have found strong relationships to play off of with their male co-stars, especially with series star Mark Harmon, who plays NCIS supervisor Leroy Gibbs.

"I've always, always felt that their relationship was so incredibly paternal" Perrette says of Abby and her boss.

"Gibbs lost his daughter, Abby doesn't have a father, and that right there lays the groundwork for that relationship."

For de Pablo, the paternal feelings apply as well, especially since she was a later addition to the cast.

"I really think that Ziva has found a family in this agency," she says."

But for as much as Harmon's character offers fatherly comfort on-screen, the show's lead actor is more like an obnoxious little brother off-screen.

"Pranks happen all the time on our show," de Pablo says.

There was even one involing an already-dead lizard, a noose and a note.

"On the noose there was a note saying, 'I couldnt take it anymore.' The amount of thought that goes into that .... it's a Mark Harmon prank," she says.

A sitcom time capsule

TV can be time machine to another era. A perfect example is The Mary Tyler Moore Show.

The '70s sitcom is among several currently airing the CTV-owned specialty channel Comedy Gold.

The station offers old school sitcoms like Murphy Brown and Fresh Prince of Bel Air. How much you are attached to each show depends on how old you were when you first saw them.

What is fascinating about The Mary Tyler Moore Show today is that it is seldom laugh-out-loud funny.

The appeal of the show, about a single woman trying to "make it on her own" in a TV newsroom, completely eludes my 17-year-old who was raised on The Simpsons.

The grip Mary Tyler Moore still has on Boomers is due to the cast.

For viewers who grew up with the series, watching it today is like flipping through an old family album. Mary Richards (Moore), Mr. Grant (Ed Asner), Murray (Gavin MacLeod), Rhoda (Valerie Harper), Phyllis (Cloris Leachman), Ted Baxter (the late Ted Knight) and, later in the series, Sue Ann Nivens (Betty White) seem like old friends.

Many in the cast are actually still working in TV. Eight time Emmy-winner Leachman, 84, is a regular on Fox's Raising Hope. Asner, 81, is shooting the new comedy Working Class for CMT. White, 88, has had the greatest late career renaissance of all, with Moore, 73, joining her for a guest stint in the New Year on White's comedy Hot in Cleveland.

What isn't in vogue is the pacing. Scenes go on for five minutes and there are few set changes.

TV moves faster today, with more commercials per half hour. The quickness seems tailor-made to suit today's shorter attention spans. What can be lost, however, are those little moments that stick in your mind years after a show has gone off the air.

The Mary Tyler Moore Show found a way to take a nothing day and make it all seem worthwhile — a comedy blueprint that never seems to go out of style. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Taylor and Jake have a happy holiday

Jake Gyllenhaal, 29, and Taylor Swift, 20, had quite a busy U.S. holiday weekend.

After first being spotted Thanksgiving Day in Brooklyn, N.Y., enjoying lattes at a cafe near Jake's sister Maggie Gyllenhaal's place, the rumored couple popped up a couple days later in Swift's hometown of Nashville, according to People magazine.

"They were not trying to be discreet by any means," a source says. "They were definitely a couple. They looked very happy."

Raising children in the limelight's glare

For celebs, bringing up kids can be daunting ● Their kids' clothes and hairstyles face constant tabloid scrutiny ● But Hollywood moms like Katherine Heigl say the 'overwhelming love' for a child is the only thing that matters

NED EHRBAR
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Being a parent is tough enough, but the glare of the limelight can complicate things, with the paparazzi, the pre-school politics and the increased risk of screwing up your kids.

"It's one of those things I think that you just have to dive in blindly," says Katherine Heigl, who recently adopted a baby girl from China with husband Josh Kelley.

"It's that overwhelming love that makes us want to procreate. No one would do it otherwise as it is just so intense."

Perhaps the single most famous Hollywood mom, Angelina Jolie, has been learning firsthand how hard the celebrity spotlight can be on children: Her daughter, Shiloh, has become a subject of tabloid attention herself at just four years old thanks to her unconventional hairstyle and boyish clothing choices.

"She likes to dress like a boy. She wants to be a boy," Jolie told Vanity Fair. "So we had to cut her hair. She likes to wear boys' everything. She thinks she's one of the brothers."

But should what a toddler wears be fodder for magazine covers just because she's the daughter of famous actors?

Since Hollywood can be a pretty strange place to begin with, a lot of celebrity parents do their best to make things as normal as possible for their kids.

"I still take my kid to school every day and put him to bed every night," says super-busy producer and director JJ Abrams. "I don't work on weekends."

Showbiz: The next generation

Long before Macaulay Culkin smacked the aftershave on his cheeks in Home Alone, kids have been stealing the show in Hollywood. And while childhood stardom can often lead to less-than-savoury adult lives, some have managed to be successful on both sides of their 18th birthday — Elijah Wood and Jodie Foster come to mind, among others.

Chloe Moretz

After slicing apart bad guys in Kick-Ass and sinking her teeth into unsuspecting adults as a vampire in Let Me In, 13-year-old Chloe Moretz might be a little intimidating to some people. But the refreshingly down-to-earth actress insists there's nothing to be scared of. "I'm just a normal 13-year-old girl," she says. And while some might worry about Moretz taking on such gruesome material, she's very good at discerning reality from fantasy. "It was all acting. It was making up a character that I'm not," she says of her work in the bloody Let Me In.

GETTY IMAGES

Jaden and Willow Smith

When your parents are megastars Will Smith and Jada Pinkett Smith, it likely doesn't take much to get used to the spotlight. After stealing scenes from his dad in The Pursuit of Happyness, 12-year-old Jaden became a movie star in his own right this summer with his The Karate Kid remake, co-starring Jackie Chan.

But before he could enjoy the attention, nine-year-old sister Willow came along to steal it with her surprise hit single Whip My Hair. Imagine what they'll do when they hit puberty.

Callan McAuliffe

At 15 years old, Australian Callan McAuliffe is already breaking hearts after starring in Rob Reiner's Flipped this summer as one half of a 1960s teen romance.

And his profile is about to skyrocket with his next role in the hotly anticipated I Am Number Four, based on the teen sci-fi novel.

But just because lots of people have been seeing his work, that doesn't mean McAuliffe has as well. "I hate watching myself, as do a lot of actors," he says.

Kodi Smit-McPhee

Like his Let Me In co-star Moretz, 14-year-old Kodi Smit-McPhee has been dealing with some hefty adult themes. He first won acclaim as the Boy in last year's adaptation of Cormac McCarthy's bleak The Road before romancing a vampire this year.

Luckily, he's had concerned adults around to help shield him from some of the mature subject matter. "We always remained protective of Kodi as a crew," says The Road director John Hillcoat. "There was a lot of black humour; you can imagine the jokes about cannibalism."

Eggs for dinner, with style

Brie and sourdough bread give 'egg on toast' a new sophistication

There are those nights when breakfast is the only way dinner is going to get on the table.

But that doesn't doom you to a bowl of cold cereal in front of the television. There are plenty of easy ways to add a dinner-like sophistication — or at least satisfaction — to your breakfast staples. And that was the inspiration for this rich and cheesy take on eggs and toast.

I started with a thick slab of sourdough pan-toasted in butter. If you insist, you could cut the fat by using olive oil cooking spray in the pan instead. Then I added an egg to the pan and a slab of brie to the bread. When the egg was cooked, but the yolk was still a bit runny, I placed it on top of the brie.

And I called it dinner. And it was scrumptious in an almost disturbingly good way.

It got me thinking that this same dish could be recast as a finger food for holiday parties, too. For that, I would roll out a bag of pizza dough as thinly as possible, brush it with some olive oil or melted butter, then pop it in the oven. When it was nearly cooked, pull it out, top it with brie and crack a few eggs on it, then return it to the oven until the eggs are ready.

LARRY CROWE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Pan-toasted sourdough with brie and fried egg.

Ingredients:

- Start to finish: 10 minutes
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) butter
- 1 thick slice sourdough bread
- 1 egg
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
- 1 thick slab brie (about 60 g/2 oz)
- 1 sprig fresh thyme

Toasty Brie and Egg

Preparation:

1. In a large skillet over medium-high, melt butter.
2. Place bread in skillet and toast until bottom is crispy and just turning golden, 3 to 4 minutes. Flip bread to toast other side, pushing it to one side of the pan. Crack egg into other side of pan. Season it with salt and pepper.
3. About 1 minute before egg is cooked to desired doneness, place brie on bread. Use a spatula to transfer egg, sunny side up, onto brie. Cover skillet and cook for another minute. Garnish with thyme and serve immediately. Makes 1 serving.

Meet our new water creatures

- Researchers comb through oceans to find thousands of new animals
- Discoveries range from 'furry' crabs to 'bone-eating' marine worms

ELISABETH BRAW
LIFE@METRO.CA

Ten years ago, 95 per cent of Earth's oceans remained unexplored. Now, experts are unveiling an unprecedented inventory of ocean life.

First, meet the Yeti Crab. It has hairy claws and reproduces its own bacteria, and is one of over 5,300 new species discovered by the Census of Marine Life. Some 2,000 researchers from 80 countries set out to document every species in our oceans.

"We knew that there were unknown species in the oceans, but we didn't know if it was one, 10 or 100 million species," says Dr. David Billett from Britain's National Oceanography Center.

"Off the British coasts, only an estimated 10 per cent of species are unknown. But off the coasts of countries like Angola, the figure is 90 per cent."

Experts found almost 200 new crabs, shrimps and prawns. "Rainforests have a reputation for biodiversity, but most of the species are insects," explains Prof. Paul Tyler, a marine scientist from Southampton University. "By contrast, there's an extremely wide range of animals in the ocean."

Billett discovered new sea cucumbers, a common marine animal in the Indian ocean. "The deep waters aren't dull places where nothing happens."

The most charming discovery may be the osedax, discovered by the Monterey Bay Aquarium Research Institute in California.

This seabed creature looks like a wig with pink twigs sprouting out. But the osedax's diet proves to be less enchanting: it feeds on whale bones.

The Mid-Centretown Community Design Plan
Community Open House

Your Opportunity to Be Involved

Tuesday November 30, 2010
Iona Hall, Knox Presbyterian Church
120 Lisgar Street
Open House: 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Presentation: 6:30 p.m.

Please join us at our second Open House to learn about the emerging directions for the Community Design Plan. We will be presenting a preliminary vision on what the future of Mid-Centretown could look and feel like. We will be asking for your views on the vision for Mid-Centretown, focusing on:

- Buildings: What should new development look like?
- Streets: What are the options for improving the condition major streets?
- Parks & Public Realm: How can we make better use of the area's limited park space?
- Community Amenities: What is missing that could be introduced in future?
- Heritage: How can we protect the best heritage buildings while allowing the area to evolve?
- Mobility: How can we move people, bikes, buses and cars without overwhelming the community?

The project area is bounded by Kent Street on the west, Highway 417 on the south, Elgin Street on the east and the Central Area boundary (mostly Gloucester Street) on the north.

Join us to share your ideas and help bring the community design plan to life

Youth tackle climate

Young Canadians head to Cancun for UN climate talks Younger voices look to add perspective on the importance of dealing with environmental issues now Worried that green issues get ignored by politicians

Jonathan Williams says for young Canadians there is an odd mix of optimism and frustration as they try to tackle the daunting challenge of climate change, despite some recent political opinions cooling to the idea.

The 22-year-old student is preparing to be a "voice" for teens and 20-somethings as global policy makers meet for UN climate talks at the end of the month.

"Young people are going to have to be dealing with this situation for the rest of (their) lives," said Williams, adding the consequences of global warming will be left for his generation to clean up, if nothing is done.

"Whether or not we'll be heard by policy makers now, I can't say," he added.

Williams is among a group of 29 young Canadians between 18 and 29 years old who will attend the United Nations Climate Change Negotiations (COP16) in Cancun, Mexico, at the end of November as part of a non-partisan youth delegation. Representatives from more than 190 countries are expected to attend, and the goal is to produce a blueprint for a new climate deal to replace or complement the Kyoto Protocol.

"Climate change isn't a problem we're going to solve in one year or 10 years or 15 years, (it's) forever."
JONATHAN WILLIAMS

But heading into the summit, which runs Nov. 29 through Dec. 10, the political climate on addressing the environment has been rather chilly.

Jim Prentice resigned as environment minister less than a month before Canadian delegates head south.

In the U.S., a Republican mid-term victory dashed hopes for climate change legislation, following a sentiment among many stateside that climate change isn't the No. 1 priority.

And officials on both sides of the border have been playing down a deal in Cancun.

"A lot of the time people look at the political issues and they don't see the environment as something that's cross-cutting, that affects everyone," said Emilie Novaczek, 20, another youth delegate, originally from Breadalbane, P.E.I., but now attending school in Halifax.

Novaczek called it "distressing" that the environment is frequently "dropped" as a political issue.

"I think that happens all the time," said Novaczek, citing the U.S. as an example.

"(U.S. President Barack) Obama had to choose between health care and climate change, basically," she said.

During the conference, Novaczek and her peers will try to spread awareness about what's negotiated and say they will let Canadians back home know about their country's position.

▶ Climate change is on the mind of young people across Canada.

The group will also submit policy proposals and positions, arguing there needs to be sufficient money so there are no loopholes in measuring, reporting and verification when it comes to an agreement.

Williams, however, recognizes that a signed deal is far from reach.

Dozens of countries ratified Kyoto, but not the United States, and the current global agreement expires in 2012.

Williams called this situation "scary," but said he expected an agreement to be hammered out by 2012.

"Yeah, it's cutting it very close," he said with a nervous laugh, but added young people will continually face this challenge.

"Climate change isn't a problem we're going to solve in one year or 10 years or 15 years, (it's) forever. We're going to have to manage the chemicals we're putting up in the atmosphere," said Williams.

Williams called it the "legacy" left to young people.

He believes they have a better grasp of the situation, having grown up in an era where everyone talks about a warming planet.

And, unlike previous generations, Williams said young people don't necessarily have to switch their world view.

For Novaczek, she said the trend of low voter turnout among her age group will need to change in order to move forward on addressing climate change, but she hasn't given up hope.

"There always is going to be that frustration sometimes, but I don't think we can let that frustration define our movement," she said.

"Nothing big has ever happened easily."

A JOURNEY OF A THOUSAND MILES

TurningPoint
TERESA KRUZE
TURNINGPOINTMEDIA.CA

"A journey of a thousand miles must begin with a single step."

The famous Chinese philosopher, Lao Tzu, has inspired many travellers, but for Darren Weir his journey began as a young boy growing up in Edmonton when he dreamed about travelling around the world.

His turning point came when a 23-year relationship came to an end.

He took stock of his life and said, "I've got some money, my health, I'm single and turning 50.

If I don't do it now, when will I?"

Weir expects the two year trip will cost him $30,000 to $40,000, and his goal is to pack in as much adventure as possible.

He'll be taking a plane ride through the Himalayas, gliding down the Nile in a wooden boat, learning to dive in the Red Sea, taking in the Surin Elephant roundup, climbing Mt. Fuji and running the Great Wall Marathon in Beijing.

The last few months have been filled with a flurry of planning, inoculations, obtaining visas and plane tickets.

He admits to only one tough moment and that was quitting his television production job at CP24 in Toronto.

Panic washed over him as he thought, "What have I done? Am I crazy?"

But his confidence returned quickly and now Darren is just days away from embarking on a trip of a lifetime.

When he returns to Canada two years from now he wants to be able to say, "I did it. I lived my dream."

His two year odyssey begins on Wednesday, Dec. 1.

Bon voyage my friend and travel safely.

School was never a strong point for Toronto's claim to comedic fame – the irreverent Russell Peters.

Yet, the multimillion-dollar grossing comic, whose brazen critiques of ethnicity and class captivate international audiences, finally got a degree.

Well OK, it's an honourary one. He didn't have to take any tests to get it, but still.

The School of Creative and Performing Arts at the Humber Institute of Technology and Advanced Learning recently presented him with an honourary degree for his keen observations on race, class and culture, and for his support of young talent.

This year, Peters launched a $20,000 scholarship for a student from his former high school, North Peel Secondary, which focuses on technical skills and trades.

Metro Toronto caught up with Peters by email and asked him for his thoughts on the award, the importance of education, and his advice for aspiring performing artists.

What did you think when you heard the Humber School of Creative and Performing Arts was giving you an honourary degree?
I thought, "Wow, that's pretty cool!" But at the same time it's kind of ironic considering I didn't go to college and just squeaked through high-school.

When you were in school, what did you think you'd be when you grew up?
When I was 14, I wanted to be a breakdancer. That was it, just a breakdancer.

What was the most important lesson you learned in school?
That the cool people in school aren't the cool people when you're finished school. The cool crowd becomes the "tool" crowd.

Had your parents chosen a career path for you?
No, they didn't lay anything out for me. We were very working class, so my parents just wanted me to get a steady job, like a union job or something where there was security.

What did they think of you not going to college? About becoming a comic instead?
They were fine with me not going to college – there was no pressure. They didn't really understand what becoming a comic meant. I might as well have said that I was going to be an astronaut. They were like, "That's nice, son..."

You didn't need higher education to be successful and have a rewarding career, yet you recently developed a scholarship for a high-achieving student planning to go to college. Why do you think education is so important?
For me it wasn't important. I felt like the system wasn't really made for kids like me – I had ADD and needed extra help, but the teachers were more focused on the kids who were "getting it," instead of the kids who weren't. That all changed when I switched schools and went to North Peel Secondary. That was the first time I felt like I fit in and that the teachers took the time to pay attention to kids like me.

What is your advice to aspiring performing arts graduates?
Don't do it because you just want to "make it big."

If you're going to do it for the money, forget about it. Being a comic or an artist of any kind, you have to do it because you have to.

It's a calling.

Texting students, irritated profs

Smartphones in the classroom are driving teachers – and students – to distraction

When his professors drone, Dan Kautz whips out his phone.

Kautz, a senior at Wilkes University in Pennsylvania, might send a text message to someone across the room — "I can't wait to get out of here" — or make plans with his roommates. He's become so adept at texting during class that he can tap out a message without even looking at the screen, making it appear as if he's paying attention to the instructor when he's really chatting with his girlfriend.

"Every single person I know texts in class at least occasionally," said Kautz, a communications studies major from Pelham, N.Y.

It's no surprise that high school and college students are obsessive texters. What alarms Wilkes psychology professors Deborah Tindell and Robert Bohlander is how rampant the practice has become during class.

Their recent study shows that texting at the school has surpassed doodling, daydreaming and note-passing to become the top classroom distraction.

Tindell instituted a no-texting policy as a result of the study, which has been presented at a pair of academic conferences.

She tells students that if she even sees a cellphone during a test, its owner gets an automatic zero.

Everybody does it

The anonymous survey of 269 Wilkes students found that nine in 10 admit to sending text messages during class — and nearly half say it's easy to do so undetected. Even more troubling, 10 per cent say that they have sent or received texts during exams, and that three per cent admit to using their phones to cheat.

Alouettes capture Grey Cup

▶ Montreal Alouettes kicker Damon Duval, right, is congratulated by teammate Ben Cahoon after kicking a field goal during the fourth quarter last night.

ALOUETTES	RIDERS

Avon Cobourne shut the door on the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Cobourne ran for two touchdowns, including a key two-yard scamper, to power the Montreal Alouettes to a compelling 21-18 win over Saskatchewan in the 98th Grey Cup yesterday.

Cobourne helped Montreal to a second straight Grey Cup win over Saskatchewan following last year's stunning victory. In the 2009 final, Damon Duval missed from 43 yards out on the final play, only to get a second chance after the Riders were called for too many men on the field.

Duval then hit from 33 yards out to give Montreal the 28-27 win.

Montreal earned its third Grey Cup win in eight appearances since 2000.

Montreal receiver Jamel Richardson was named the game MVP while Saskatchewan defensive lineman Keith Shologan was the top Canadian.

But once again with Commonwealth Stadium again a sea of Roughriders green, the Riders stayed in the game due to a Duval miss. With Montreal up 21-18, Duval couldn't connect from 41 yards out.

Saskatchewan returned the ball to the Alouettes 16-yard line with roughly a minute and a half remaining, giving the sellout gathering of 63,317, a Edmonton Grey Cup record, a wild finish.

The close affair followed the regular-season script for these two teams. They split their series 1-1, with Saskatchewan winning a thrilling overtime 54-51 contest July 1 before Montreal took a 30-26 decision in August.

Raps hit new season low in points

ATLANTA	TORONTO

If there was a silver lining to be found in the Raptors' home loss against Atlanta, head coach Jay Triano isn't seeing it.

Josh Smith scored a triple-double with 12 points, 13 rebounds and 10 assists yesterday as the Hawks handed Toronto its second defeat in a row, 96-78.

"They beat us every single position, every single guy," the Raptors head coach said. "We've got to get better."

The Hawks won every matchup from starters to the bench and they dominated the Raptors in the second half before a crowd of 17,032 at the Air Canada Centre.

Andrea Bargnani scored 14 and DeMar DeRozan added 13 for the Raptors (6-11), who shot 40 per cent from the field in posting a season low in points. The previous low was 84, Nov. 6 at Portland.

The Raptors were only six points down at the half but were held to 11 points in the third quarter. "Nobody could score and we couldn't stop those guys and that is why you have a 20-point game," Triano said.

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to play@metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You'll do anything to escape a situation you find restrictive in the extreme. But in fleeing one prison, you may find yourself trapped by another. Bide your time.

♉ Taurus April 21-May You sometimes find it hard to share information, even when you know that you should. Today, be open with everyone you meet, especially if there is money at stake. Honesty is by far the best policy.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Be warned: If you try to force your will on other people today your strategy will backfire. It could also be you who ends up being moved around like a pawn or a puppet on a string.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 When dreaming, make sure you have at least some chance of reaching the goals you set. Some things are simply beyond your powers to manifest at the moment, so don't get carried away.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 No matter how hard you try, you can't seem to get through to certain people. It's as if there is a wall that cannot be moved. Perhaps you should take the hint and stop trying so hard.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 You may be tempted to move things along at a faster pace today but is that such a good idea? Speed does not necessarily equate with success. Control your impatience.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Setbacks and delays are to be expected over the next 24 hours, and people's nerves are sure to be frayed. Don't add to a negative situation by losing your cool as well.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Don't let your guard down today because there are people out there who are waiting for a chance to take advantage of you, emotionally as well as financially. Stay alert to what is going on around you.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Today it will be difficult for you to get motivated – either that or you will try too hard and act too quickly and make a costly mistake.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 You are looking forward to starting something new, but you are fearful that you will get it wrong and look silly. Don't worry: it will be a huge success — with huge rewards.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Make the best possible job of what you are asked to do today, even if it is something you have never attempted before. Act as if there is not the slightest doubt that you will be brilliant.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Has someone in a position of power got it in for you? Maybe, but even if they have there is no reason why you should be worried.
